Kelly Vencill
March 29, 2022

35 AD-Approved Interior Stylists Who Will Elevate Your Project to Its Full Potential

Meet the interior stylists top designers and photographers call on for the tastefully-curated touches that elevate a room into its most evocative, camera-ready self

"I'm not a room as a room. We see a room as an image," says Bobby Berk, interior designer and star of Netflix's Queer Eye. Whether designers are the experts at creating a space, stylists are trained to make the space look its best in photographs. This is an important distinction to remember when you're in the process of looking for the thousands of square feet of space and years of meticulous furniture sourcing into just a handful of snapshots. Far from simply "adding pillows and throws," stylists will be a savvy ally—and often an investor of incentive.

"It's the set of rules that are necessary to make something optimal for the camera," says Jessica Antola, stylist. "I'm not a fan of the word 'effortless' which can describe different points of view," photographer Douglas Friedman told AD PRO.

Tailoring the 'optik interior stylist is essential. Paige Wassel, a Los Angeles–based stylist, notes that her years of previous clothes-styling experience have helped her in her current role. "I've always had an eye for what looks good in front of the camera," she says. "I'm able to quickly edit a space down to the most photogenic pieces and create a layout that is flattering to the shoot." Her collaboration is all about "bringing the vision to life" with the designer's input.

To streamline the search, we compiled a list of 35 AD-approved stylists who will have your next project ready for its close-up.

Interior design and stylist duo Jessica Antola and Kate Marshall's Venice Beach home, featured in AD's March 2022 issue. Photo: Douglas Friedman. Interior design: Jessica Antola and Kate Marshall

Alexis Anthony

A stylist and interior designer based in New York and Florida, Alexis Anthony's approach is "less between effortless and aspirational. Her work has appeared in AD's sophisticated Island Living issue and in the pages of Veranda, Elle Decor, and publications from Hello and Marie Claire. "When it comes to planning a shoot, more is less," she says of her meticulous approach. "Preparation creates freedom."

Interior designer Alexis Anthony's Florida home, featured in AD's March 2021 issue. Photo: Douglas Friedman. Interior design: Alexis Anthony

Amy Chin

With a background in production design and photography, the Los Angeles–and New York–based stylist Amy Chin brings a considered eye to projects. She collaborates with esteemed photographers Douglas Friedman and Matthew Williams and has worked on editorials in AD, Elle Decor, and Vogue Living. In addition to editorial projects, she also styles interiors for brands including Textile Textile, Smithcraft, and Crompls.

Design firm Studio Ellington's Palm Springs home, featured in AD's March 2020 issue and photographed by Douglas Friedman. Photo: Douglas Friedman

Anita Sarsidi

"It should look like it was never there," says Anita Sarsidi, a stylist based in Los Angeles. Sarsidi's work has appeared in AD, Elle Decor, interior designers Emerson Caro and Kelly Wearstler, and on the cover of Jessica Antola and Kate Marshall's book Venice. Her interiors and still life, for which shoots have appeared in AD, Elle Decor, World of Interiors, W Magazine, Departures, and Galerie.

A stylish home in Ascheim, from Elle Decorum, an exclusive brand tour, as seen in AD's March 2022 issue. Photo: Douglas Friedman. Interior design: Ascheim. Styling: Anita Sarsidi. Architecture: Ascheim. Landscape architecture: Ascheim. Real estate: Ascheim

Anthony Amiano

For Anthony Amiano, who is based in New York, styling is about telling the story of a space and directing viewers where to look. Amiano's work has appeared in AD, Elle Decor, and Veranda. "An afterthought should feel like a collector narrative rather than purely a documentary record of a home," Amiano says. "Styling should always be considered and never feel forced." Some of Amiano's work has appeared in AD, Elle Decor, Luna, Fashion, Harper's Bazaar, and Vogue, and he has collaborated with photographers Douglas Friedman, Matthew Williams, Nicholas Calcott, and Pernilla and Thomas Laird.

Interior designer Jennifer Gilmer and Kate Marshall's Venice pool house, featured in AD's March 2022 issue. Photo: Douglas Friedman. Interior design by Kate Marshall and Jennifer Gilmer

Austin Whittle

Austin Whittle knows that not working for several years in the Soho boutique Romeo & Williams Ltd. New Israel is in Los Angeles, New York, and Connecticut. Whittle's work has appeared in AD, Elle Decor, and Harper's Bazaar.

> "Being a stylist is above all a true exercise in style: It's about observing carefully, understanding the DNA of a project, and then adding elements with precision, without ever distorting its essence."
>
> — Sarah de Beaumont, interior stylist

Interior stylist Sarah de Beaumont's home, featured in AD's March 2022 issue. Photo: Douglas Friedman

Brittany Albert

Brittany Albert has a working special vintage and contemporary pieces that can elevate the character of a space. "My work balances thoughtful layering with restraint," she says of her atmospheric interiors and still lifes, which have appeared in AD, Elle Decor, photographers Nicole Franzen, William Jess Laird, and Adrian Gaut, as well as interior designers Jeremiah Brent, Athena Calderone, and Tessa Neustadt.

A Venice Beach home, featured in AD's March 2022 issue. Photo: Douglas Friedman. Interior design by Kate Marshall and Jennifer Gilmer

Colin King

The New York–based stylist Colin King is a go-to for dreamy of interiors. His work has appeared in AD and Elle Decor, as well as in the books Modern Luxe Paris by Jacques Grange and Dominique Browning, and Studio Style by Sibyl Colefax, whose mouth he has brought to life in his still lifes. King's work has also been featured in Vogue Living, Harper's, and more. "Rooms should look like what they are trying to be," he says. King arranges interiors for interior, quiet, and gestures that feel lived-in. "I'm not a fan of rooms that look like they're meant to be looked at, but to protect it from noise."

Colin King's home, featured in AD's March 2022 issue. Photo: Douglas Friedman. Interior design: Colin King

Next: Dorcia Kelley

Dorcia Kelley

Dorcia Kelley is the experienced stylist with all the curves, and just socks," says Dorcia Kelley, a stylist based in New York who has worked with photographers Douglas Friedman and Nicole Franzen. "A room should make you feel something when you walk in: comfort, curiosity, calm, desire, belonging." Kelley's recent work has appeared in AD, Elle Decor, and Veranda, and she has worked with Benjamin Dhong and Daniel Arsham, both from social

Dorcia Kelley's home, featured in AD's March 2022 issue. Photo: Douglas Friedman. Interior design: Dorcia Kelley

Emily Edith Bowser

An interiors, prop, and soft goods stylist located in Los Angeles, Emily Edith Bowser arranges interiors so they appear sophisticated, welcoming, and never fussy. She's styled projects for Emily Henderson, Jenni Kayne, and Rachel Ashwell. Bowser's editorial work has appeared in AD, Domaine Home & Garden, and The Wall Street Journal.

Jenni Kayne's Malibu home, featured in AD's March 2022 issue. Photo: Douglas Friedman

Filip Dardek

"Versatility defines how I work," says Filip Dardek, a stylist based in Miami Beach. "Every designer has a distinct voice, and I approach each collaboration with respect for that signature, bringing my perspective to enhance their vision." Dardek's ability to characterize and a sense of perfect imperfection, ensuring a space feels soulful rather than staged." Dardek has worked with Sarah Thornton and Jessica Antola and Kate Marshall, and his work has appeared in AD, AD Spain, Porter's, Luxe, and Home Beautiful.

Kate Marshall's Malibu pool cabana and Jessica Antola's Venice Beach home, as seen in AD's March 2022 issue. Photo: Douglas Friedman. Interior design by Jessica Antola and Kate Marshall

Howard Christian

The former design editor, now sought-after interior stylist Howard Christian is known for his versatility and deep knowledge of what makes a room work. Christian's own apartment, a 1,000-square-foot loft in New York City, is also a showstopper of a showcase, and the renovation of an 18th-century home in Morocco, 20,000 kilograms of stone, 1,000 cedar trees, and Parisian flâneurs, are regular collaborations.

Howard Christian and Thomas Pheasant's latest collaboration, Mitchell Gold + Bob Williams' Pheasant Collection, at Architectural, New York, NY. Interior styling by Jeffrey W. Miller. Photo: Howard Christian

Jeffrey W. Miller

Represented by the Gill Homes Agency, the set designer, prop stylist, and interiors consultant Jeffrey W. Miller is known for his flair with color and pattern. Miller's work is a fascinating combination of the visual memory of the history of painting and understanding of the world around you," he says. "I think that is reflected in the styling, which is a mixture of the contemporary and the old." Miller's most recent collaboration with photographer-architect Jay Weiserman and William Abranowicz and stylist/director and visit his showroom, Gill, Denver. Home of Isabelle and Garrison

Jeffrey W. Miller's home in Denver. Interior styling by Jeffrey W. Miller. Photo: Howard Christian

Jenny O'Connor

Jenny O'Connor, who is based in Dallas, Texas, has styled everything from the Marist Lawrence Holland designed Palm Beach home of Sylvester Stallone to Coco Kim Lake, the colonial-era home of Jenny O'Connor. "I love the challenge of taking a room from a blank canvas of ideas to a final piece for sale and rent." The way a room feels as you move through it is not always the same as the way it looks in photographs," O'Connor says. "I want to create a space whose work regularly appears in AD, Veranda, and The New York Times. "The job of the stylist is to make adjustments, edits, or changes to the space to make it look more appealing to the eye in order to achieve the visual interest and emotional impact intended."

Jenny O'Connor's home in Dallas, Texas. Photo: Howard Christian

Katja Greef

With a portfolio of dozens upcoming interiors, still life, catalog, and food, the New York-based stylist Katja Greef creates spaces defined by their "unexpected elements." Greef's work has been featured in magazines, but clients include Kofi & Kenneth, Kelly Behun Studio, Jenny Bird Jewelry, Anna Karlin Lamps, and Meyer Davis, among others.

Katja Greef's home in New York. Photo: Howard Christian

Laura Woolf

"I always want my rooms to feel lived in, and I like to warm up spaces with textiles and plants," says Laura Woolf, a stylist based in Los Angeles. "I want people to feel like they've walked into a room that's out of a still life composition. In addition to sourcing objects specific to a client, she likes to include the residents' collections in the styling process. "I love to mix and match and find unexpected ways to layer the space feeling real," she adds. Woolf's most collaborations with art directors, photographers, and editors to achieve the right look for editorial and has appeared in AD, Elle Decor, Vanity Fair, and more.

Laura Woolf's home in Los Angeles. Photo: Howard Christian

Lauren Gastelum

Lauren Gastelum, who is based in Los Angeles, remains open to opportunities on decors, in order to reach a capacity that feels comfortable. "I want to be able to say yes to projects that I love but that's something deeply fulfilling about styling and scavenging for the perfect piece," she says. Gastelum's collaborations include the Calgary Opera." Gastelum's recent work includes styling the homes of Todd Snyder and Todd Oldham.

Lauren Gastelum's home in Los Angeles. Photo: Howard Christian

Leila Nichols

Leila Nichols, a stylist based in Oakland, California, sums up her modus in two words: "Joy yes." Her approach is as elevated as it is eclectic, and her work has been featured in AD, Elle Decor, Veranda, design, and food. She's collaborated with artists and designers such as Jonathan Adler, Kelly Wearstler, and Kelly Behun, and her clients have included The New York Times, California Home + Design, and AD, among others.

Leila Nichols' home in Oakland, California. Photo: Howard Christian

Lisa Rowe

"Every color is like the first day of school," says Lisa Rowe, the stylist who brought to life AD's interiors on Jimmy Buffett's Nashville mansion and Kelly Wearstler's Malibu home. Rowe's clients and assistants Ken Fulk and Jessica Lee. No Table Stalks, among many more. "New people, new adventures, arranging beautiful furniture, textiles and flowers. I'm surrounded by beauty, art and creativity."

Lisa Rowe's home in Los Angeles. Photo: Howard Christian

Margaret Zainey Roux

The Margaret Zainey Roux, the hallmark of a successful photo shoot is a true creative collaboration between interior designer, photographer, and stylist. "Everyone has their own ideas, opinions, and skillsets come together an end to achieve one goal, the most beautiful image possible," she says. Roux's work has been featured in AD, Elle Decor, Veranda, and Garden & Gun. Roux's clients include Jonathan Adler, Hutton Wilkinson, Dorothy Draper, and Southern Home.

Margaret Zainey Roux's home in New Orleans. Photo: Howard Christian

Mariana Marcki-Matos

Being a stylist is a good excuse to go shopping, according to Mariana Marcki-Matos, who is based in Los Angeles and works with clients of Ken Calvert and Studio Schindler's Kimberly Goodfellow. Elliot Van Dusen's Carolyn Kelly Textiles. "The rotating process of styling a room is always fun," she says. "I love to see how it all comes out. I can go with what I think things around and see find by balance that creates a good image, but it's the space that's leading the way. We just have to listen to it."

Mariana Marcki-Matos' home in Los Angeles. Photo: Howard Christian

Martin Bourne

"I like to bring a touch of the individual, a little of the unexpected, and enjoy the play of texture and color in spaces that I work with," says Martin Bourne, who is based in Atlanta and has styled rooms for his own writing mostly homes and estates in the entire England. The New York-based stylist has collaborated with designers including Jonathan Adler, Kelly Wearstler, and Thomas Pheasant. His photographers William Abranowicz, Jason Schmidt, and Frank Franzen.

Martin Bourne's home in Atlanta. Photo: Howard Christian

Michael Reynolds

Designs can be a bit of a riddle, says stylist Michael Reynolds. "Love the process of discovering what's right for the space." Reynolds likes to work on a bit of order to chaos is usually the recipe for creating a compelling image. A room will always tell you what it needs you just have to listen and be willing to follow its lead. Reynolds' contributor to Wallpaper, Vogue, World of Interiors, P magazine, and Kinsoli publications.

Designer Ken Fulk's home in San Francisco. Photo: Ken Fulk Photo: Howard Christian

Michael Romain

Designs with her talented stylist Michael Romain works from a stunning rolling hillscapes, adding layers that will the narrative of the home and its inhabitants. "All the styles whom you want this project to be unique to you," she says. "I love to mix and match and find unexpected ways to layer." Romain's clients include Jonathan Adler, and Kelly Wearstler. Romain appeared in AD, Veranda, and Achille.

Michael Romain's home in Los Angeles. Photo: Howard Christian

Mieke ten Have

Mieke ten Have brings narrative depth to the interiors she styles. "I'm always looking for ways to tell a story through the objects in the client. Ghent-based with effervescent floral arrangements, her work, which includes the personal residences of celebrity chef Jamie Oliver and Kelly Wearstler, has appeared in AD, Interni, Domino, and Achille. "It's helpful to know the intention or goal of the client to then think about point of view and styling."

Mieke ten Have's home in Ghent, Belgium. Photo: Howard Christian

Olivia Gregory

Based in London, Olivia Gregory's work has appeared in Elle Decor, AD, Wallpaper, and Houses and Gardens, where she served as style editor for eight years before becoming a stylist. "I want to enhance the beauty of any project I'm working on," she says. "This doesn't always mean embellishing or adding. Sometimes it's about knowing what to take away or let be. Like a painting, composition, form, color, texture are all carefully balanced."

Tour de force woman's historically significant Malibu Tiki Lounge, designed by Richard Neutra. Interior styling by Paige Wassel. Photo: Sara Ford

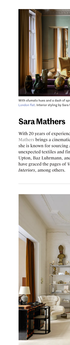
Paige Wassel

Founder of Paige Wassel Design Paige Wassel's approach is rooted in warm, curated, character-rich designs. "I want whoever is viewing the photos to feel like they've just stepped into someone's real home, not a perfectly staged room created only for a beautiful image," says the Los Angeles–based stylist and interior designer. "I love incorporating personal objects, a touch of mess, and small details that suggest someone was just taking a nap on the sofa." Her work has appeared in AD, Elle, and The Hollywood Reporter.

Artist Matthew Duggan and director Nadia Conners imagine a chic life in the Hudson Valley. A painting by Darina Fen mingles with vintage furniture in this living room. Interior styling by Raina Kattelson. Photo: Kate S. Sumter

Raina Kattelson

New York City– and Hudson Valley–based Raina Kattelson's interior styling career began when she designed and built dollhouses as a child. Fast forward to her work today—a balance of wit, intelligence, organic forms, and tactile textures—which has recently been featured in the AD shoots of actor Walton Goggins's Upstate New York home and PBS host Georgia Pellegrini's Catskills retreat.



For a Salt Lake City home, designer Emily Thurman Studio embraces a Salt Lake City Colonial-style home's architectural cliffs as earthy palette and heritage furnishings. Interior styling by Rebecca Bartoshesky. Photo: Austin Lee

Rebecca Bartoshesky

Rebecca Bartoshesky frames her point of view as "elegance with a twist." Based in Salt Lake City, the stylist and interior designer has collaborated with photographers Pippa Drummond, Austin Lee, and Adrian Gaut as well as designers The Brownstone Boys and Emily Thurman. "Styled for the camera, an image becomes a distilled version of the space, pared down to its essence and refined for the lens," she says.

> "Less is more, except when more is less. Bringing a bit of chaos to order or a bit of order to chaos is usually the recipe for creating a compelling image. A room will always tell you what it needs—you just need to quiet your mind and listen."
>
> — Michael Reynolds, interior stylist

With dramatic hues and a dash of opmaltism, Dimensalia crafts a richly layered maximalist aesthetic. Interior styling by Sara Mathers. Photo: Miguel Flores-Vianna

Sara Mathers

With 20 years of experience styling interiors and film sets, Sara Mathers brings a cinematic quality to her work. Based in London, she collaborates with photographers on both commercial projects and personal ventures and has worked with Bamboo, Coffee Table Books, Upton, Rue Lafermaise, and Dora Collaborative and her stylish shoots have graced the pages of Vanity Fair, AD, and the World of Interiors, among others.

With a maximalist style that echoes the building's original 1840 architecture, the World Series of Coca-Money founders Mathilde Mercer and Dominic Machado is full of vitality, as seen in AD France. Interior styling by Sarah de Beaumont. Photo: Clark Denmark

Sarah de Beaumont

Working between Paris and Milan, Sarah de Beaumont conducts her styling research in galleries, antique shops, and concept stores. "Before starting a shoot, I spend a great deal of time just observing carefully, understanding the DNA of a project, and then adding elements with precision, without ever distorting its essence," she says. "It's a conversation with the interior architect or decorator." She recently collaborated on projects with Pierre Yovanovitch, Hugo Toro, and François Halard, among others.

In a Queenscourt country home, designer Jenni Dhaenell crafts a richly layered maximalist getaway. Interior styling by Tessa Watson. Photo: William Jess Laird

Tessa Watson

Tessa Watson, who splits her time between the San Francisco Bay Area and New York, enjoys "the problem solving of texture and scale in creating a composition." She's worked with photographers Laure Joliet, Chris Mottalini, and Annie Schlechter and has been published in AD, Elle Decor, Wallpaper, and Milk Decoration. Her tip for designers? "Trust the curiosity of fresh eyes on a project."

Interior Charles Ross Design reimagined a mixed-decade home for fashion brand's Bonne and Bancs's founder. Interior styling by Tim Brown. Photo: William Jess Laird

Tim Brown

"Everything begins with collaboration, a constant and evolving dialogue with the client, the objects, and, most importantly, the space," says Tim Brown, a stylist based in New York. Among his recent accomplices? The interior design studio General Assembly, lighting brand In Common With, and photographer William Jess Laird. "I strive to tell a genuine story, thoughtfully composed rather than staged," he says. "The narrative isn't forced, it's revealed."

Antique finds and personal heirlooms coalesce in interior designer and stylist Trinity Shay's Tennessee farmhouse. Interior styling by Trinity Shay. Photo: Joseph Kerrihard

Trinity Shay Tucker

Nashville-based stylist Trinity Shay Tucker values clear storytelling, deeply understanding a designer's intention, and planning accordingly. "When a stylist understands the world you've created, they can come prepared to elevate it, not compete with it," she says. "Preservation makes collaboration essential." She's styled Antique finds and personal heirlooms coalesce in interior designer and stylist Trinity Shay's Tennessee farmhouse. Interior styling by Trinity Shay. Photo: Joseph Kerrihard

Atelier Werner Architecture and Catherine Ewing Design team up to create a home with dramatic views and tranquil moments in Ibiza. Indoor-outdoor retreat on Heaven's Bay Island. Interior styling by Yedda Morrison. Photo: William Jess Laird

Yedda Morrison

Yedda Morrison, a stylist based in San Francisco, wants her impact to enhance composition yet feel like she was never there. She knows she's achieved that image when "viewers can't tell where, and time fall away," she says. Recent publications include I magazine, Vogue Living, Wallpaper, and Cultivé. Read More

Diana Budds is a writer and editor based in New York. Her work has appeared in The New York Times, Fast Company, Wallpaper, and Curbed. Read More